The family moved to Kamloops in 1903, where MacNab became employed as a bookkeeper and clerk for a bank and later R.L. Unwin. MacNab enlisted during World War I in 1916 and was sent overseas with the 172nd Battalion C.E.F., even though he was declared unfit for service during his medical exam prior to enlistment. While in England he was hospitalized and soon sent home; his lung and heart problems would continue to plague him for the remainder of his life and he was unable to work. During his time in Kamloops MacNab was involved in many social and charitable groups, including the A.F. and A.M, the Knights of Pythias, the Elks Club, and the Legion. Edgar Howard MacNab died on February 10, 1940 in Kamloops, BC at the age of 47.
